

Once upon a time there was a boy who lived in Karachi; he was innocent, honest, and crackpot, people used to call him name such as fatty, talkative, stupid, idiot etc. But he was jaunty and he didn't care What Other People Think of him but there was a problem with him that he can't tell a lie, He did not have any friend because of telling the truth. His classmates always taunted, critics and teased him because he was a foolish boy and he was different from others

He performed prayers five times in a day and he loved to recite surah rehman. He always wanted to be Hafiz e Quran but he was scatty. He learned then forgot even he forgot the names of the people. When he was 18, people called him battery because he wore glasses. He had special power and he didn't know about it when he prayed to Allah his wishes always came true but he didn't notice.

When he fell In love, He prayed to Allah please make her as my future wife and I will not ask anything from you Only one last wish plz plz plz

Unfortunately his prayers were not accepted and he lost her. He started smoking. He only performed one prayer in a week that's Friday prayer. He was angry at Allah because he did give him what he wanted and then he committed sins But still he can't tell a lie and his prayers were still accepted for himself and for others And He still didn't notice His dad and mom were in serious condition. he prayed for them and his parents were better than, whatever he wanted he got it He became famous and rich. He got married, after sometime they loved each other he was enjoying happy married life and he was the happiest person until he started telling lies, for First time he got scared he thought he would never do that again but he can't stop himself by telling a lie because business needs lie he thought..

After some time his prayers are not accepted and he was in trouble and worried. He started prayers five times in a day but he did not get peace in his life again He still didn't know why his prayers are not being accepted. People think he is rich and he has no worries

His classmates gave him respect and now he has friends but there is no peace in his life

What do you think? His prayer will be accept in future

His peace and happy life will come again

The End
